Q&A

Applying for a Consent To Create a New Lot? Tips that can help.

These tips are intended as a guide to help you decide if your proposed lot might qualify for a severance through the consent application process. There are other factors which may be considered in assessing your application for consent.

Is there an official plan for your area?

Yes, the official plan is a local land use planning documents adopted by the municipality and approved by the province. It reflects provincial and local planning issues and among other things, establishes policies for lot creation.

Your proposed lot must conform to the requirements of the official plan and have regard to the Provincial Policy Statement under section 3 of the Planning Act.

Is there an official plan and a zoning by-law for your area?

Yes, a zoning by-law exists in your area. It sets out specific requirements for new development (e.g. minimum lot size, frontage acceptable access etc.).

Your proposed new lot must conform to the zoning controls.

The municipal Clerk can help you interpret the official plan and zoning by-law.

Is consent the way to go?

Generally the creation of new lots by consent may be considered where:

- only one to three are proposed;
- no more than two lots have been severed from the parcel since adoption of the official plan;
- the new lot and the remaining lot will have access to an existing publicly-owned and maintained road or for cottage lake or remote lots have adequate parking & docking facilities available;

Where can new lots be created?

Generally only limited development is permitted in rural areas. This helps protect the natural environment, the natural resources and the character of rural areas and also discourages the inefficient provision of services.

New lots created for permanent year-round use should be located in existing, built-up areas.

All new lots must be suitable for their intended use. For example, new lots must be large enough to accommodate the proposed building and all servicing requirements.

Where new lots can't be created?

Generally, lots cannot be created on provincially significant wetlands, prime agricultural lands, lands containing mineral aggregate resources, hazardous lands such as steep slopes and areas susceptible to flooding or where fish or wildlife habitats will be disturbed.

New lots will not be created where they are not compatible with surrounding land uses. For example, a new lot for a house probably would not be permitted next door to a factory or a waste disposal site.

What kind of access do new lots need?

Any new lot must have safe, long-term access for all vehicles, including service and emergency vehicles.

Generally, this means:

- lots should be located on publicly-owned road(s) which are maintained year round;
- a limited number of seasonal residential lots on private roads may be considered, on an in-fill basis, provided they won't be converted to permanent residential use and they have registered rights-of-way with direct access to a public road;
- water access may be acceptable for cottage lots if the lots are on an island or in a remote location, where future demand for road access is not anticipated; lots should be located within a reasonable distance to publicly-owned and maintained parking, docking and boat launching facilities.

What kind of services do new lots need?

In general:

- a new lot must be acceptable for the installation of a septic tank and tile bed system and wells;
- lake water for cottage lots may be permitted, subject to the approval of the Ministry of the Environment and Energy and/or local Health Unit.

What happens to my application after I submit it to the Township?

The Township is required to give notice of a complete application to persons and agencies that may have an interest in the proposed consent. This can occur in 2 ways: (1) by mail or personal service to all landowners and any condominium corporation within 60 metres of the subject land, or (2) by publishing a notice in a local newspaper.

If the Township decides to approve the application, in most cases there will be conditions stipulated and these conditions must be fulfilled prior to granting the consent. The applicant has one year to fulfil conditions, otherwise the application is deemed to be refused. The applicant or any person or public body can appeal the decision and any or all of the conditions to the Ontario Municipal Board within 20 days of the giving of the notice of decision.

If the Township proposes not to approve the application, the Township will send a notice, giving the reasons for the proposed refusal. The applicant or any person or public body has up to 20 days from the giving of the notice to appeal the decision to the Ontario Municipal Board. If at the end of 20 days there is no appeal, the decision to refuse becomes final.

The applicant can appeal the application to the Ontario Municipal Board if a decision has not been reached on the consent request within 180 days of the Township's receipt of an application that contains all of the prescribed or mandatory information. Before filing a notice of appeal, the applicant should determine the status of the file since it might be possible for the Township to make a decision on the application within a reasonable time. If all the necessary information is submitted at the time of application, delays in processing the application can be avoided.
